Washington, DC — 771.213.5616

Jonathan D. Daido helps underwriters, lenders, issuers, borrowers, and other financing participants navigate public finance matters involving affordable housing. His practice focuses on tax-exempt and taxable bond and loan financings and structured debt financing transactions.

For clients pursuing public offerings, private placements, and related structured finance transactions, John provides support throughout the financing process, from due diligence and disclosure review to negotiation of bond and loan documents, preparation of legal opinions, and closing coordination.

John brings a financial-institution perspective to his practice, with experience reviewing cross-border transactions under U.S., UK, and EU sanctions regimes, advising on regulatory risk, and coordinating across legal and business teams. He also supported attorneys on European bond defaults, restructurings, refinancings, and liability management transactions, including noteholder meetings, trustee powers analysis, and enforcement workflows.
