Kayla O'Leary Daly is an Intellectual Property + Technology transactions associate. Kayla assists clients with a wide variety of intellectual property and technology counseling, prosecution and transactional matters, including intellectual property development and license agreements, software as a service (SaaS) agreements, data license agreements, outsourcing and services agreements, and various other commercial contracts that include intellectual property and/or technology components.

She has experience servicing clients across a broad range of industries and sectors, including technology, consumer products, consulting, manufacturing, healthcare, and food and beverage. Kayla also has experience assisting with and advising on mergers and acquisitions where intellectual property and/or technology assets are pertinent to the deal's value. She is a member of our firm's Intellectual Property + Technology and Business Transactions groups.

Intellectual Property and Technology Transactions

Kayla's practice involves advising clients on the development, protection, licensing and commercialization of intellectual property and technology. Kayla has extensive experience drafting and negotiating data license agreements and advising clients regarding the licensing, development, and ownership of data rights.

In connection with technology development, she assists clients with a wide variety of agreements necessary to protect, maintain and exploit technology. For example, Kayla has aided clients with all aspects of a new technology product launch, including drafting development agreements, supply and manufacturing agreements, terms and conditions of product purchase, product support and maintenance agreements, and end user license agreements for software products.

Kayla also represents clients licensing software and outsourcing IT services by advising on and negotiating software license, master IT services, cloud services and software as a service (SaaS) agreements.

Business Transactions

Kayla has experience assisting companies with various aspects of their general commercial contracting needs, including domestic and international distribution and manufacturing agreements, master services and other vendor agreements, employee and independent contractor confidentiality and inventions assignment agreements, sales agreements and purchase contracts, non-disclosure agreements, reseller agreements, sales representative agreements, consulting agreements, minimum advertised price policies, and website terms of use.

Trademark Prosecution

Kayla assists clients with brand management including clearance, prosecution, maintenance and enforcement of trademark registrations and rights worldwide. Kayla also aids clients with resolution of ownership and rights disputes including assisting with U.S. Patent and Trademark Office opposition and cancellation proceedings.
