Raymond M. Gauvreau focuses his practice on insurance coverage advice and disputes and extra-contractual litigation. He also assists with appeals and the defense of class actions. Ray's insurance coverage experience includes the representation of property and liability insurance carriers in connection with high-exposure litigation that often involve extra-contractual claims for damages.

Ray has assisted in the defense of Covid-19 coverage matters both at the trial and appellate level in state and federal courts and has participated in the defense of putative class action lawsuits involving commercial and homeowner's insurance. He has experience in litigating matters across the federal and state courts of Connecticut from the pre-suit stage up to mediation or trial. Ray understands that no two cases are alike and does all he can to identify a client's business objectives in order to secure the best possible outcome. He is a member of the firm's Insurance + Reinsurance group.

In addition to his coverage work, Ray has experience in insurance defense, products liability, anti-SLAPP litigation, and has provided guidance on a number of education and employment law matters. Ray also has experience handling pro bono prisoners' rights matters. Before entering private practice, he served as a legal research law clerk for the judges of the Connecticut Superior Court, where he was based in the Judicial District of Litchfield at Torrington.
