New York — 212.451.2985

Sabrina M. Galli assists corporate and other institutional clients in litigation to resolve disputes across many industries, including manufacturing, technology, construction, and managed care. Sabrina's experience includes federal and state court proceedings as well as alternative dispute resolution processes, and routinely handles cases involving contract disputes. She is a member of our firm's Business Litigation group.

Sabrina is also a member of our firm's interdisciplinary Education Industry team and helps counsel education clients on a range of areas, including a number of issues involving student affairs policies and procedures, Title IX, and misconduct investigations. Her passion for education law began in the classroom, when Sabrina taught high school in Eastern North Carolina through Teach for America.

Prior to entering private practice, Sabrina served as a law clerk for the Honorable Robert Lougy, Presiding Judge of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Division, who has since been appointed Assignment Judge of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Mercer Vicinage.

Pro bono work and other community service is important to Sabrina. She is a volunteer attorney with the New York Family Court's Volunteer Attorney Program. As a law student, she participated in the School of Law's Youth Justice Clinic, representing students in juvenile justice and special education cases.
