Tasnuva (Taz) Islam focuses her practice on business litigation.

Business Litigation

Taz assists clients facing a range of commercial and business disputes, including claims for breach of contract, as well as claims in business torts, such as fraud, misrepresentation, and unfair and deceptive trade practices.

Prior to joining Robinson+Cole, Taz practiced at a law firm based in the Northeast, where she worked on various business litigation matters, including shareholder disputes, breaches of commercial leases, and wage act claims against franchisers. She also served as a judicial law clerk for Justice Amy Blake at the Massachusetts Appeals Court.

While in law school, Taz served as a lawyering fellow, where she supervised first-year law students in developing an updated immigration law primer for the International Refugee Assistance Project. She was also part of the Civil Rights Restorative Justice Clinic, where she investigated a racially motivated homicide from the 1930s.
